

Partnerships benefit students

All those involved, but especially students, benefit from a well designed, effectively managed partnership.

Students benefit from:

- opportunities to interact with knowledgeable, skilled and educated individuals in a variety of roles in the larger community and learn how the real world works.
- career awareness enhancement in authentic work force situations where they encounter a variety of occupational roles and can improve such important skills as business writing, resume preparation and interviewing.
- curriculum enrichment opportunities which capitalize on individual student interests and needs.
- work experience through cooperative education placements, field trips and tours, and one-to-one interaction with highly skilled business employees
- insights in to the relevance of classroom curriculum in the larger community.
- the derived motivation to develop personal education and career plans and to enhance interpersonal and communication skills.
